

Case Study: Layla

1. How does Layla use and interpret language for diverse purposes?
2. How does Layla adapt her communication to her audience or situation?
3. How does Layla participate in conversation or storytelling?
4. How does Layla understand, express, and regulate emotions?

Analysis of Layla's Communication Style

1. Using and Interpreting Language for Diverse Purposes

- Layla can make requests clearly, using gestures when needed.
- She may find it harder to use language to express feelings or elaborate on her thoughts in social situations.

2. Adapting Communication to the Listener or Situation

- Layla effectively uses non-verbal communication to supplement her speech when needed.
- She may not instinctively adjust her communication based on the audience or context, such as giving additional detail when speaking to someone unfamiliar.

3. Participating in Conversation or Storytelling

- Layla responds well to direct questions in conversations.
- She finds initiating conversations and expanding on her ideas challenging. Her stories are literal and concise, without elaboration or emotional depth.

4. Understanding, Expressing, and Regulating Emotions

- Layla recognises when she is upset, although she doesn't always verbalise and regulate it.
- She may struggle to identify or articulate why she feels a certain way, making it harder for others to support her during group work.

Case Study: Priya

1. How does Priya use and interpret language for diverse purposes?
2. How does Priya adapt their communication to the audience or situation?
3. How does Priya participate in conversation or storytelling?
4. How does Priya understand, express, and regulate emotions?

Analysis of Priya's Communication Style

1. Using and Interpreting Language for Diverse Purposes

- Priya communicates effectively in writing and can present clearly when reading from notes.
- Priya may find it harder to use spoken language for emotional expression or spontaneous interactions.

2. Adapting Communication to the Listener or Situation

- Priya uses email as a thoughtful and structured method of communication that suits their preferences.
- Priya's monotone voice and limited eye contact might be misinterpreted as disinterest or rudeness, even though this is not their intention.

3. Participating in Conversation or Storytelling

- Priya can prepare and deliver clear, concise presentations.
- Priya doesn't add emotion or adapt their delivery to engage the audience. In conversations, they may avoid sharing details unless prompted.

4. Understanding, Expressing, and Regulating Emotions

- Priya remains calm and composed in most situations.
- Priya may have difficulty recognising when others misinterpret their tone or body language and might not express their emotions verbally, leading to misunderstandings.
